Trial of Nicholas S. Gordon for the Murder of Amasa Sprague.

Thursday Afternoon, April 10.

William H. Greene-Saw Nicholas S. Gordon about 5 o'clock on the day of the murder; he was going up

THURSDAY APTERNOON, APPILIO.

WILLIAM H. GREENE.—Saw Nicholes S. Gordon about 5 o'cleck on the day of the murder; he was going up Westminster street, in this city.

PAUL! WHEELOCK.—Went into Nicholas Gordon's store early in the winter of 1843, and before the murler; had seen Nicholas before, but was not acquainted with him; he was talking about his license and Mr. Spregue; said be would be revenged on Sprague, and seemed angry; he was talking to a man I did not know; I stopped only about ten minutes.

would be revenged on Sprague, and seemed angry; he was talking to a man I did not know; I stopped only about ten minutes.

Gilles James was in Nicholas Gordon's store in the fall of 1843, asked him for a glass of brandy; he said he had no license; said Amass Sprague, a damned Algerine, had prevented his getting a license; but that Amass Sprague would be out of the way before another year, and would not be before the town Council of Cranston to prevent his getting a license he said ne would have his revenge if God spared his life. I also called there the last Wednesday of May; Caleb Arnold was with me, and called for brandy; Gordon raid he had no license, and that if he sold wi hout one, they would prosecute him; saw him at Matthewson's tavern in this city, on the night of the murder; he called there with a man he called O'Brien, and inquired the time of night; some one said Mr. Sprague was dead; Nicholas said 'is it possible!" said it was 'impossible;" O'Brien said he was glad of it; Nicholas said he was sorry, and said to O'Brien, if you talk so, the people in the house won't like it, and I shall go along; they went out door, and turned up the street.

Cross-czamied.—The subject of the murder was being talked about at the tavarn, when Nicholas came in; he appeared sincere when he said he was sorry, and seemed shocked when he learnt Sprague was murdered.

I HADEWS MANCHESTER.—I was in Nicholas Gordon's ahop early on the Saturday morning before the murder, and asked for something to drink; he said he could not sail it, as he had no license; Ban Kit came in, and he gave him something from a jug in a tumbler, which I took to be new rum; Nicholas said Sprague had kept him from getting a license; end said he would have him out of the way, or put him out of the way, before next Town Council; there were several men in the store; a tall, stout man, and as small man; they were fooling, and appeared like men who had been drinking; they had a gun.

Cross-czsmined.—I have known N. S. Gordon a good many years: what he said Town Council; there were several men in the store; a tall, stout man, and a small men; they were fooling, and appeared like men who had been drinking; they had a gun.

Cross-examined.—I have known N. S. Gordon a good many years; what he said, did not impress me very strongly; he did not enjoin any secresy of what he said; I looked upon it only as a complaint against Mr. Sprague; he always appeared to be a very mild, peaceable man. Nicholas Sankeve.—Saw Nicholas Gordon in Septemer or Cotober, 1843, at a tavern in Warwick; told him, not till the second Mondey in next month; he said he thought of purchasing a tavern stand at Crompton Mills; then saked me if Villiam Sprague was in Warwick what Amasa Sprague ruled the town of Cranston, and prevented him from obtaining a license; said, God damn him, he would come up with him before the year was up.

Cross-examined.—This conversation first occurred to my mind when I heard of Mr. Sprague's murder; I did not know who Gordon was, when he talked with me; I inquired and ascertained his name, in less than half an hour alterwards.

Josh Stavens.—Saw N. S. Gordon at Hoyle's tavern, in this city, Monday morning after the murder; saked him about the murder; he said the murder had been committed; said he was sorry for it, as the chief of his business came from the men who worked in Sprague's employ said it would hurt his business; some one mentioned a pistol or gun had been found, and the murder; would be detected; Nicholas said he did not know if he should.

William Boyn—Lived near Mr. Sprague's: two years ago saw Nicholas have on a cost; the color of which retioned a pistol or gun had been found, and the murderer would be detected; Nicholas said he did not know if he should.

William Boyn—Lived near Mr. Sprague's; two years ago saw Nicholas have on a coat, the color of which resembled the one in Gourt; when I first saw this coat after the murder I thought it resembled the one I had seen Nicholas have on; some one had just said it was Nick Gordon's coat, and this might have helped the impression of resemblance.

James Baown—Saw Nicholas on Monday afternoon after the murder; I had lately came from Fall River; he told me there had been a sad affair in the village; he stated to me where he was on Sunday; said he had not been to see Mr. Sprague; he felt ashamed to go alone; he also said he felt ashamed to go to the places of murder alone, but he intended to go: I thought he looked differently from what he generally did; he held his head down; did'nt look me in the face.

Cross-comined—I knew that Gordon was suspected, and believed him to be guilty.

S. B. Cusmino—I made the calculation of the apparent time of sunset on the 31st of December, 1813. At the place where the body was found it would be 4 5'clock 20 minutes: at Sprague's house, 4 o'clock 24 minutes: at Kingston's, 4 o'clock 25 minutes.

Amos Poyram—Saw, Nicholas Gordon in the road near Mr. Knight's house, in Cranston, on the night of the murder: a tall man was with him: I thought he was intoxicated: he said a bad affair has happened out here: thank God I did not help kill bim: I was not here.

Attorney General Blake here stated that the Government evidence, and had not concluded at half past 6 o'clock, when the Court adjuurned to meet to morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

FSIDAY MORNING, April 11.

Mr. POTTER resumed and concluded bis opening argument, touching upon all the evidence which had been introduced by the government, and applying it to the charge set forth in the indictment.

When he had concluded,
SAMUEL CURRY opened for the prisoner, briefly setting forth the propositions which the defendant would attempt to establish, and then proceeded to examine the PRISONER'S WITHERSES.

HORATIS N. WATERMAN —Recalled for the prisoner.—Was near by when De Merritt traced the foot prints to

Was near by when De Merritt truced the foot prints to Gordon's house I did not notice any tracks leading from the house towards Hawkins' Hole; I never heard of any such track till Mr. De Merritt penke of such a track on a former trial. I never heard of it till now.

*Cross-examined — I went to Gordon's I through the orchard; was several rods from De Merritt.

*Direct — I was looking for tracks, and had the same opportunity, when near the house, to observe such a track, that he had.

*Walter Beatte. — Went with Rowland Mothewson to Bog Meadow, with a boot, to see jif it would fit the track for a license alterwards, and was opposed by Sprague; there is no record of this.

Crass-examined.—Licenses were granted to other persons that year, do not know to whom Nicholas Gordon attributed his failure to obtain a license. At the August meeting, Gordon said the remonstrance misrepresented him; Sprague said he could prove sill that there was in the remonstrance in a court of law; Gordon denied it; Gordon's license expired in April, and was renewed till July 3d; then it floally expired. Bix councimen were present in July, and the vote retusing to grant the license was unanimous. Never heard any person represent Gordon as a quarrelsome man.

Direct resumed.—Think I heard Sprague accuse Gordon with lugging a negro voter; Gordon said, he never hugged a negro women, or had his wagon filled with stones, Gordon's remarks before this, were addressed to the Council Calus Annold — Was at the stone of Nicholas Gordon with Giles James, on the 1st June, 1843; did not hear Gordon mention Mr. Sprague in connection with his license; think James did not talk with Gordon at all; he and I went in and cense out together.

Cours-examined —I never told any one that I heard Gordon threaton sprague.

Direct resumed.—I asked for brandy; Gordon said he should have had brandy, but for Mr. Sprague.
